Family Concert, Sunday 18th October at 3pm

Jonathan Clifton's good friends, Simon Mayor and Hilary James, were popular as the presenters of the BBC TV Children's programme "Playschool", where children loved the silly songs, puppets and games. They have since won numerous awards as musicians. Simon has played leading violin at the Royal Albert Hall with the BBC Concert Orchestra, as well as being the world's leading mandolin player, and classical guitarist. He also plays a variety of other instruments, as well as being a popular composer, while Hilary has won numerous awards as a singer, and also plays numerous instruments including the bass Mandolin which is taller than she is! They have also continued to produce children's concerts and records, where humour and various instruments introduce children to the joy of music.

This Sunday 18th October at 3pm Simon and Hilary will be presenting a Family Concert at the Morrell Room in Streatley (Adjacent to St Mary's Church) which will include various instruments, and music from Children's songs to classical music, with much humour and lots of laughs. Families from children to grandparents are invited to discover music in an informal setting with afternoon tea and cakes for sale too! Tickets are £15 available from Inspirations in Goring Arcade, via their website https://mayorandjames.com/gigs/ or at the door on the day with card or cash.
